MAN Truck & Bus SE's central corporate communications is now working in a new structure with the aim of implementing its communications strategy more consistently and simultaneously streamlining processes. Four newly created departments are bundling related activities and topic responsibilities in order to reduce duplication of work and designate a clear contact person. In addition, a newsroom was introduced for editorial work in which internal and external publications are planned and prepared using agile methods. Unaffected by the organizational changes, the well-known press spokespersons remain the first point of contact for journalists.

Central corporate communications now consists of four departments: Strategy & Issue Management, Content & Channels, Event & Project Management and Public Affairs. Stefan Klatt will continue to be in charge.
